

PREACHING/TEACHING

Scholarship and Open

TOPIC/LESSON

You may preach a sermon as you would do in a church service, or teach a Bible lesson as you would do in Sunday School. If you are preaching a sermon, your message should be expositional (development of a particular passage) or topical (development of a topic from several passages). You will have a stronger sermon by communicating a specific topic rather than a broad topic.

If you are presenting a Bible lesson, you should develop a Bible passage or topic in a lesson or teaching format. For example, you could teach a lesson from Joshua 1 or the way of salvation. You may gear your Bible lesson toward teens (e.g., Sunday School class or youth group) or toward adults (e.g., men's meeting).

You may seek assistance in selecting a Bible text or topic, but your sermon or Bible lesson itself must be your own composition.

OUTLINE

Your outline should include the following items:

- Type of presentation: sermon or Bible lesson
- Intended audience: youth or adult
- Topic or theme
- Scripture passages
- Introduction
- Two to five main points with at least two subpoints

for each main point

- Conclusion

Outline points should be parallel in construction, such as:

- I. Ignoring God's Moral Standard
- II. Knowing God's Moral Standard
- III. Obeying God's Moral Standard

Notate an illustration by writing its descriptive phrase in parentheses under the corresponding main point or subpoint as in the following example:

- A. Rampant cheating in high school
(Illustration: story of classmates sharing answers on chemistry test)

Type the outline on 8 ½" x 11" white paper (two-page limit, including bibliography), single-spaced with double-spacing between major points.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Use five or more reliable references for the bibliography in addition to your Bible. References may include books, Bible study tools, biographies, devotional books, commentaries, Internet sources, magazines, and illustration and speaker quote books.

Note the following sample entries for listing references in the bibliography.

• Book

Pickering, Ernest. Charismatic Confusion. Schaumburg, Ill: Regular Baptist Press, 2006.

• Magazine

Peck, Michael. "Put the Past behind You." The Baptist Bulletin (June 2007): 18, 30.

TIME LIMIT

Your presentation is to be seven to nine minutes long. The timekeeper will stand at the end of eight minutes as a one-minute warning and will stand again at the end of nine minutes to signify the end of your speaking time.

PRESENTATION

For your presentation you may use your Bible, your outline, and any visuals you choose. A lectern and table will be provided for you. You are to provide any other equipment you need.

- Outline—Refrain from overly depending on your outline or from memorizing your speech or lesson word for word as in a dramatic presentation. Points will be deducted for over dependence on the outline or memorizing your presentation.

- Visuals—You may use handmade or purchased visual aids in your presentation, but using visuals is not a requirement. Possible visual aids include objects, pictures, posters, charts, or PowerPoint slides.

You may find it helpful in your preparation to video-record your presentation so you can see and hear areas that need improvement (e.g., posture, gestures, vocal inflection).

INTERVIEW QUESTION

In addition to your prepared message or Bible lesson, the judges will ask you to respond to an interview question. You will have thirty seconds to think about the question. You will then have one minute to respond to the question. The timekeeper will stand at the end of one minute, signifying that your speaking time has ended. You will be judged on your organization of thought, the suitability of your response to the question, and your use of grammar.
